

The German Herald

Rearmament: The Solution

Yesterday we went to the celebration of German rearmament, we all know that rearmament will help us in a lot of ways but we want to explain why and why we are so happy.

The main reason why we are so happy is that rearmament goes against the League and this is something that we had waited for, for years.

Another thing that rearmament will help is unemployment. Nowadays it is almost impossible to find a job but with rearmament there is going to be a chance of joining the army and this means that conscription will probably open.

Maybe this is similar to what happened to Japan. Japan went against the League and she did not care about what the League would say so Japan withdrew from the League of Nations.

A thing that made this possible was Britain. Although Britain is France ally, Britain thought that rearmament would be a good buffer against Communism.

We are also happy because rearmament made us powerful again and we owe this to Hitler who handled the situation in an excellent way.

Another thing to be happy about

After a long of time we recover the Saar region which was taken by the League. This happened after the people voted if the Saar should return to Germany. Obviously the people voted that the Saar should return to Germany so this is another thing that Germany should be happy about.